Group I, claim 1, drawn to a loose particulate material;

Group II, claim 7, drawn to a method for making a loose particulate material; and

Group III, claims 9-11, drawn to a method for treating waste water with a loose particulate material.

The special feature linking the three inventions is the loose particulate material, which loose particulate material is unpatentable over Capdeville et al (U.S. Patent No. 4,915,884) in view of WO 96/25367, for the following reasons, and therefore does not provide a contribution over the prior art.

Capdeville et al discloses forming a loose particulate material by incorporating grains of a water soluble mineral salt (see col. 4, line 21) in a plastic matrix such that the water soluble mineral salt is both embedded in the plastic matrix (i.e. substantially unexposed at the plastic matrix surface) and distributed on the surface of the plastic matrix (see Fig. 1; and col. 6, lines 43-45). The resulting composite material is then treated by dissolving the water soluble mineral salt from the surface of the plastic matrix, thereby producing concavities on
